

Scott Kress

Scott is a highly accomplished leadership and team development trainer, author and keynote speaker.

He is the President of Summit Team Building and has created highly successful development programs for many of the Fortune 500 companies. Scott has only one goal; to assist teams, leaders, and individuals in reaching their peak performance. This is accomplished through combining the latest team and leadership theory with cutting edge experiential training to create one of the most effective training programs available today. Scott's team and leadership development programs are custom designed to meet each client's needs.

Years of experience, two undergraduate degrees and a Masters in Leadership and Training provide Scott with unique qualifications to design and deliver some of the most innovative corporate experiential based training available today.

Scott has taught Leadership and High Performance Team Development for some of the world's leading educational institutions including the Rotman School of Management, the Odette School of Business, and the University of Edinburgh. Scott teaches in the Executive MBA, International Executive MBA, and MBA programs and has received several teaching awards including professor of the year.

Some of Scott's programs focus on; Teambuilding, New Team Formation, High Performance Team Development, Leadership Development, Values and Mission Creation, Communication Enhancement, Change Management, and Process Improvement.

Additionally, Scott has gained great insight into the inner workings of leadership and high performance teams through almost 30 years of leading climbing expeditions. He has guided and summited peaks throughout the world. Scott is the 51st Canadian to summit Mount Everest and one of less than 300 people in the world to climb the 7 summits (the highest mountain on each of the 7 continents). In 2014 he led a group of ill and injured soldiers to the North Pole and in 2016 skied 960km to the South Pole making him one of less than 45 people in the world to accomplish this series of challenges.

Through his dynamic background of education, training, experience, and adventure, Scott can help your teams and leaders reach the peak of their performance.
